

SKYTRAIN: A GRAVE TO GRIEVE

When World War II ended in September 1945 following the bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, many servicemen who were deployed overseas dreamt of returning home to their loved ones. But for some, their dreams were brutally cut short such as the case of the crew on Dakota 43-16261, flying from Singapore to Butterworth before crashing into the dense jungle of Beruas, Perak, Malaysia.

The bodies of Flight Officer Jason B Baskett, First Lt William H Myers and Private First Class Donald E Jones were left on the crash site for 70 years before a joint effort by the Malaysian and United States Government were able to recover their remains.

Bill Myers, a nephew of William H Myers, who heard about the tragedy from her mother, has made it his mission to find his uncle's remains and return them to the U.S. to be buried alongside his loved ones.

This is a story of those left behind, only making the trip home after decades of waiting where grief has finally found a grave.
